

How to be The Richest Comedian Nobody's Ever Heard Of

Organization and Direction is the key to building any business.

1. Do you consider yourself more of a writer or a comedian?
2. What are your goals?
3. What are your obstacles to reaching those goals?
4. How much do you want to make next year doing comedy (either writing or performing)?
5. What are your strengths now? (Writing, Improv, Sketch writing, joke writing)
6. How much time can you do on stage now as a comedian?
7. How much of that time is doing clean comedy?
8. Considering all the material you have, subtracting the amount that's not clean, how much time do you think you'll need to reach a solid hour?
9. How many jokes do you write per day?
10. What do you have an expertise in? (Hobby, sport, survivor, self-esteem, addiction, etc.):
11. Besides being a funny in your comedy, what's your focus? Your theme? What do you seem to drift to the most when you're writing?
12. Do you want to travel or stay close to home?
13. If you could do one thing in your life, what would it be?

COMEDIAN'S 12-STEP PROGRAM

What's your 5 year Plan? You're Goal? In other words, when you picture yourself in the world of comedy, what the hell do you see yourself doing? What's your image? What do you want to accomplish?

Take 5 mins to write this out. No, really do it!

Once you have this mission/goal statement. I want you to come up with 3 STEPS it would take to get there.

1.

2.

3.

For each of the 3 steps, drill down to specifics and find 4 steps that will have to be done to make each step happen.

When you are done, this will be your Comedians (Writer's) 12-Step Program
